

S02.4

An approach to the wheezy infant in primary care

Patrick Bindels

Hoofdafdeling Huisartsgeneeskunde, Erasmus Mc, University of Rotterdam, The Netherlands

Corresponding author: Dr Dermot Ryan, University of Edinburgh, Allergy and Respiratory Research Group, Edinburgh, UK. E-mail: dermatryan@doctors.org.uk

Background: Wheezy infants and children are a very common problem presenting to the primary care physician. It is sometimes not fully appreciated that there are many different causes of wheezing. The identification of the cause is likely to lead to improved management of the child.

Educational Aims: to explore the causes and consequences of wheezing in infancy in childhood, the evaluation of the problem and suggestions for appropriate management to reduce risks of adverse outcomes, using a structured approach to patient stratification.

